FOR REWRITING THEIR STORIES WITH US
DORIS DILLON SCHOOL OF CAMBODIA

<https://www.dorisdillonschoolincambodia.org>

In 2007, Bret Harte Middle School and Leland High School students in San Jose, CA built from the ground up a middle school in the rural Cambodian village of Sangker Doch in Kampot province.

Since then, everything has changed.

With your help, we've created education projects to support all students' education through high school and university to fully enable each student to create a career path which best realizes each individual student's gifts and passions. We've become one of the top-ranked village schools nationally, based on 9th grade national examination results.

We've worked with village families to develop health and sustainability projects to help each family create a better future.

Here, we've built a community.

Founders Jim & Denise DeLong with Rachna and Pisey. Both girls had dropped out in 7th grade because of their families' poverty. We provided scholarships from 7th-12th grade and, with our continuing funding, both are now attending university. Doris Dillon's portrait is in the background.

With help from donors like you, we've...

Funded over 110 scholarships for girls who had dropped out of 7th grade over the last decade. Only two of these girls have dropped out. The rest have continued their education through high school, and some will go on to attend the best Cambodian Universities.

Our alumni have excelled much beyond their circumstances and poverty; thank you for believing in them.

5 of our 12 alumni attending the prestigious leadership Academy in Phnom Penh--a college prep boarding high school that has an admirable record of placing their graduates in the best universities in the country--consistently rank top 5 in their grade levels.

This is Phon Dalen, 11th grader at Phnom Penh High School (Leadership Academy) and Doris Dillon alum. She placed 1st in her class of 50.

This is Lonh Sony, 11th grader at Phnom Penh Thmey and Doris Dillon alum. She placed 3rd in her class of 50.

This is Prak Sreylim, 10th grader at Phnom Penh Thmey and Doris Dillon alum. She placed 1st in her class of 49.

With your help, these girls have bright futures ahead of them. For them, going to university means the opportunity to rise out of poverty for themselves and their entire family.

However...they need your help. It costs $2,100 per year or $175 per month for us to support each of our 12 alumni at Phnom Penh Thmey. For each girl, $2,100 means a year's tuition, room/board, food, and transportation from the girl's village to Phnom Penh Thmey. Without these funds, they cannot continue on in secondary school or go on to university.

But without your help, their future is in jeopardy

Nationally, only 5.4% of village children have access to a middle school. And, almost 20% of those children who do attend middle school drop out by the end of 9th grade. Poverty is the main cause: children quit school to find work to help alleviate their family's life of subsistence.
